SPEECHES ON THE ARMY BILL. LEADERS INDICATE THE POLICY OF

THEIR PARTIES. The National Liberal Champton Attacks the Centrists and Richterists-Caprici Has on Assured Majority for the Bill-Emperor William Will Not Visit Norway.

BERLIN, July 8.-The speeches that were made for and against the Army bill in the Beichstan yesterday and to-day were of a purely partisan character, indicating nothing the undercurrents which may ultimately guide the votes of the several parties. Each peaks: mulcated his known programme, and amide! any reference to a compromise.

Herr Poeckel, who leads the Democratic faction of the Anti-Semites, for that small party has not escaped division, in his speech to-day suggested the ferms on which his half-dozen followers would support Chancellor von Caprist. The suggestion contained the idea that fils terms were not granted, the faction would maintain its opposition and set its face against

The hest speech made to-day was that o Dr. von Bennigsen, the National Liberal leader, who allacked the Centrists and Richterists declaring that they were defeating their own purposes by the intensity of their hostility to the Covernment. These parties, he said, were rejecting conciliatory proposals, and fortheir own terms or nothing. It was this attitude that had led to the political destruction of the Fraisinaige party, for which Eugen Eichler was responsible. The voters, Dr. von Bennigsen added, had deserted Herr Richter

Herr Richter was very angry at this allusion to the defeat of the movement which he had led to almost complete extinction, and made a furious reply to Dr. von Bennigsen. He said, among many other things, that moral principles formed the sole standing ground of the Padical People's party, and that the ultimate triumph of these principles was assured. The defect of his party was, he claimed, but momentary.

Then forr Preiss, an Alsatian, had an inning of the old style of denouncing an increase of the army. The increase asked for by the Government, he said, was needless, and would place an oppressive burden upon the people. His speech was simply a repetition of the threadbare arguments against the measure.

The obvious determination of a large num ber of the members to be heard on the bill implies that the discussion will last until the end of next week.

Wednesday next is the day for private members' motions. The Centrists will then raise the question of the readmission of the Jesuits into Germany. The Freisinnige papers persist in stating that the Government's support of or refraining from opposing this ultramontane proposal will be the price paid the Centrists for their support of the bill. Both the Centrist leaders and the Government adherents deny leaders and the Government atherents deny that there is any compact. The Chancellor undoubtedly has a majority in favor of the bill, without the Centrists. In the lobbies to-day it was not the Jesuit but the taxation question upon which the Centrists declared an arrangement for their support was possible. While Herr Groeber proclaimed "no compromise" in the House, members of the Lieber wing of the party said in the lobby that if the Chancellor distinctly pledged the Government to cover the increase in the expenditures by a progressive imperial tax on incomes of over 12,000 marks the Centrists would vote for the bill. Privately they are angling for a deal, which is likely to be arranged, giving the Government a large majority. Dr. Lieber means to insist that the bill go to a committee, and this will give time for negotiations to be carried on.

The session is certain to last longer than was at first expected. The National Liberals have given notice of a motion in regard to the distress caused by the drought, and also in regard to the lask of fodder wanted for the army manneuvres, and to its limited supply in the districts outside of those where the manneuvres are to be held.

The Richterists, with the members of the Volkspartel, will propose the entire suspension of the import duties on fodder until May, 1884. The Socialists will support this measure. that there is any compact. The Chancellor

The Emperor hus abandoned his proposed trip to Norway. The conflict of the Norwegian Radicals against the Government is approaching a dangerous climax. After decreeing the exclusion of the Swedish colors from the national flag, a majority of the Storthing now refuse to vote sumplies for the consular service unless their demands for consular representation for Norway be accorded. The Stockholm Alchanda, an official paper, says that the refusal will provoke a conflict between Norway and Sweden, and recommends an immediate discussion of the position by an extraordinary session of the Swedish Lifet.

THE REHRING SEA CASE.

Mr. Phelps Closes His Long Speech for the American Side,

Panis, July 8 .- The Hon. E. J. Phelps of counsel for the United States finished his closing address before the Behring Sea Tribunal of Arbitration to-day. He opposed the British proposal to establish a twenty-mile zone within which scaling should be prohibited, basing his objection on the inefficiency of the proposal and upon the impossibility of setting the limits of the zone effectually. All the evidence submitted to the tribunal had shown that seals were taken at distances ranging from 30 to 150 miles from shore. Proceeding to compare the present British proposals with those made by Lord Salisbury. hewas interrupted by Sir Charles Russell, of counsel for Great Britain, who said that Lord Salisbury denied having made the proposals referred to.

Mr. Phelps replied by reading Lord Salisbury's despatches. He showed that Lord Salisbury had receded only after Canada had

SUIPS CLEAN UP FOR SUNDAY.

The Russians Hear That the Cruiser Pamint Azova Isn't Coming. The officers of the Russian war ships now in the North River were much interested yesterday in the statement that Mayor Gilroy and the Columbian Committee of 100 are to get together on Tuesday and devise ways for their further entertainment.

"What? Some more? Here in New York?" exclaimed Capt. Zelonoy of the Dimitri Donskol. "Oh no!" he added. Then he smiled as he read a newspaper clipping and saw the city still had $25,000 left of the fund with which to ontertain. The other officers read the clipping with evident satisfaction.

The Captains and officers made and received no calls yesterday, but the crews of all their ships-the Nachimoff, the Donskoi, and the Rynda-were busy all day painting and clean-ing the ships, until at night there was hardly a dirt spot left On board the Nachinoff special preparations were being made for the fête which is to be held on Tuesday. It is called the festival of St. Paul, the patron saint of Admiral Nachimoff, for whom the ship was named, and Tuesday is the anniversary of the birth of the Admiral. The officers and crews of the other ships will be invited to the festivities. There will be a religious service, speeches for the Czar and Bussia, a banquet for the Captains and officers and for the Russian Consul-General, Olarofsky, while the crews will get extra grog. Tosky, while the crews will get extra grog. Today an Episcopal society will visit the Nachimoff. There will be no religious services on the Donskol or the Rynda to-day because the priests of both vessels, accompanied by a dozen men, have gone to Wilkesbarro to dedicate a Russian church.

An odd sight on the Donskol yesterday was a group of sailors sitting on the deck, busy with needles and thread making Russian flags and ensigns. In the centre of the group was a Singer sewing machine, at which was seated a sailor pumping the treadles with his bare feet, and stitching a large blue cross on a square of white cloth. It was quite straight stitching, and stitching a large blue cross on a square of white cloth. It was quite straight stitching, too.

After the sailors had cleaned up the ship—the Donskoi—they fell to on themselves. In the stern of the vessel were a score of the crew stripped to the waists, their broad backs and muscular shoulders glistening with cold water which they splashed on themselves. Close to these sailors were other sailors indulging in hair cuts. The man to be clipped squatted on a low stool on the deck, tucked the broad flap of his collar down his neck in lieu of a towel, closed his eyes, and clasped his hands about his knees. Then another sailor stood over him with shears which could cut steel wire, and did his work in a most thorough. If not artistic, manner. At the left of these sailors stood a dozen others, each with a tin cup containing a brush, and gazing—some of them in distress—at the celling. In front of each sailor stood another sailor, with a razor in his hand. Shaving was the last stage in the sailors' cleaning up.

Capt. Zelonoy of the Donskoi said that a telegram received yesterday from St. Petersburg stated that the cruiser Pamiat Azova, which was to come here with the hattle ship Nicholas I, had gone to the Mediterranean Instead. The Nicholas I, is expected to reach New York on or about the 14th. She is a battle ship of 9,000 tons, 326 feet in length, 67 feet beam, twin screw, with a speed of fifteen knots and 8,000 horse power. She was built in St. Petersburg in 1889, and is entirely Russian, both in design and in construction, as are all the ships the Czar has sent to this country, She carries two 12-inch, four 9-inch, eight 6-inch, and twenty rapid-fire guns. She is commanded by Capt. Diker.

THE REORGANIZATION PLAN WILL PROBABLY BE SUCCESSFUL New Corporation to be Formed to Take Over the Assets and Business-An Answer to Some of the Criticisms Reflecting Upon the Company and Its Management,

The indications at the close of business yesterday were that the plan for reorganizing the National Cordage Company will be successful. The deposits of the stocks of the company with the United States Trust Company the last few days have been very large, and foreshadow deposits of a majority of the stock at the close of business to-morrow, when time for assenting to the plan expires. It was reported yesterday that the Reorganization Committee had decided to extend the time for depositing securities under the plan, but the committee caused a statement to be publisted that there was no authority for such an assumption. It is not generally known that it is the intention of the committee to turn the property of the Cordage Company over to a new corporation, which will obtain possession of the same by the closing out in legal form of the claims against the concern. The committee has the right to do this under the reorganization agreement, and only those stockholders who are parties to that agreement will be entitled to stock in the new com-

As a great many statements have been published reflecting upon the company and its officers, many of them unfair and others untrue, the President of a prominent financial institution, who is familiar with the affairs of the Cordage Company and intimately acquainted with its executive officers, said yesterday that he would like to call attention to a few facts in their defence, especially as they are debarred by their present position from speaking in their own behalf. "The most serious allegation that has been made," he said, "is that dividends have been paid which were not earned. The answer to this may be found in the report of the Reorganization Committee in the following paragraph:

"As a matter of abundant precaution, how-ever, the committee has recommended a re-duction of the book estimate of the value of merchandise, assets and other items, to the extent of $1,501,000, which represents a re-duction in value accruing since the end of the last fiscal year, and especially since the ap-pointment of receivers.

"If this deduction had not been made by the committee the assets of the company would exceed its liabilities by $15,247,000. showing that the company with a $15,000,000 capitalization would have a surplus of $247,000 applicable to dividends. The committee states applicable to dividends. The committee states that it did this 'as a matter of abundant precaution,' and that the reduction in the value of the assets has been made 'especially since the appointment of receivers, who were appointed May 4."

The last dividend was declared early in April; and as no one could then foresee the inability of the company to continue borrowing, as it had been doing for years, or that a semi-panic was impending, it was justified in April; and as no one could then foresee the inability of the company to continue borrowing, as it had been doing for years, or that a semi-panic was impending, it was justified in declaring that dividend. If it had not done so, both the securities and credit of the company would have been placed in jeopardy, and, in my opinion, it would have precipitated the collapse, which at that time was not anticipated by the directors, who believed that times would improve so that the company could continue to borrow as it had in the past. "It has further been lost sight of, or not generally known, that since the company issued its preferred stock in 1850, it has acquired by cash purchase a number of properties of great value, which have materially assisted it in earning its dividends for the last year. The purchase of these properties used up what working capital the company originally had, but added materially to the earning power of the corporation. It has been well known to the banks and bankers through whom the company did its ousiness that it was running without working capital, and as long as money remained easy those bankers were extremely giad to furnish all the working capital required. glad to furnish all the working capital re mained easy those bankers were extremely glad to furnish all the working capital required.

"The acquisition of the new mills largely increased the company's business, as is shown by the committee's report. The production for the first six months of 1893 was at the rate of double what it was during 1891, showing a continuous and preserous growth of the business. Another fact, but one not stated by the committee, has been accomplished by the directors. The small mills have been dismantied and consolidated with larger mills, so that the company now has fewer mills than it had before, but of a much larger capacity and with a reduced cost of output. This has been out of the expense accounts of the various mills, and the plant of the company has thus been put in far better position than formerly without any increase of capital account.

"Relative to the increase in the common stock the committee makes the following statement:
"The transaction of increasing the comstock the committee makes the lenowing statement:

"The transaction of increasing the common stock as shown by the records of the company, from ten million to twenty million dollars, has not been carried into the books of account. When this shall have been done, an increase in the value of book assets will be shown.

"This increase in the capital stock was only make in the again part of this year, and allowed.

"This increase in the capital stock was only made in the early part of this year, and although voted on and entered on the minutes, had not been put into the books of account because no trouble or receivership was anticipated, and such entries are very easily made from the records, and do not affect the ordinary, every-day transactions of the company. The assets upon which this stock was based are mostly made up by the value of certain leases and good wills, over and above their cost to the company, including those of the Security Corporation. The value of these leases and the reasons for this increase were laid before the Stock Exchange Committee on Stock List, and the increased stock was listed on the strength of them.

"At the same time, the market value of the stock was practically cut in two by this increase, and the dividend on it was reduced from 12 to 0 per cent. thus practically advertising to the public that the increase was not founded upon cash assets to that extent. The validity of this increase was approved by various counsel of high standing, and the fact that the stock was listed on the statements then made should be stated in their favor that they have worked stronuously for years to put the company in a strong and independent position from a manufacturing point of view; and, being largely interested in this result, they have refused to accept any salaries, as stated by the Reorganization Committee's report.

"From the foregoing it may justly be laised that the directors have worked hard

From the foregoing it may justly be "From the foregoing it may justly be claimed that the directors have worked hard and honestly for the National Cordage Company; that no dividends have been paid out of the capital, and therefore must have been earned; that the business is larger and in better shape for economy of production and distribution than over before, and the only trouble the company has encountered has been its inshifty to borrow its requirements, as it had hitherto done, on account of the unusual financial stringency.

ability to borrow its requirements, as it had hitherto done on account of the unusual financial stringency.

"I cannot see why it is not to the interest of every stockholder to subscribe for the new preferred stock, thus paying his contribution toward the working capital of the enterprise. Stockholders will then hold the stock of a new company with large and adequate working capital, which will prevent its being pressed in times of financial stringency, as it has been. Besides, its earning power will be increased by the operation.

Besides, its earning power will be increased by the operation.

"The Heorganization Committee states in its report that there will be a large saving in interest by the cash capital now provided, and its members are of the opinion that the company'can pay its intereston its bonds, its dividends on its preferred stock, and in good years satisfactory dividends on its common stock. No more can be asked of any corporation."

Probable Close of the Coal Miners' Strike KANSAS CITY, July 8.—It is now more than likely that the strike of coal miners in Kansas will be brought to a speedy termination. It has just become known that at the meeting of the operators held here yesterday a definite proposition of the miners to return to work was received and acted upon. The operators decided to give them 54 cents, or one cent less than they asked for. The offer will be submitted to the miners at once, and a conclusion will be reached as soon as they can convene to act upon it.

A day or so later Sergeant Dalcy received an anonymous letter, directing him to call at Howden's express office, in 1.320 Third avenue, New York city, for an express package. Sergeant Daicy went to the place designated and took away a box containing a quantity of the stolen goods. A number of pawn tickets were found in a sugar bowl in the box. Tickets bearing date of June 6 and 21 were issued by R. P. Wollhelm of 1.485 First avenue and Pawnbroker Flatto of 1.295 Third avenue, who also issued other tickets on June 13 and 17. Then there were tickets issued by S. Leipziger of 1.321 Third avenue, bearing date of June 21, and others issued by F. Sobel, 1.416 Second avenue, dated June 24.

Hiring an express wagon, Sergeant Daicy and Detective Kavanagh made the rounds of these pawn shops, and collected the articles called for by the tickets, and then the population of Astoria was invited to inspect the silverware display in the station house.

sue a Fleeling Talef. A short, thick-set tough darted from Seventh avenue around the corner of Thirty-first street at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, sweeping past a policeman who was talking with a group of friends in front of an oyster stand on the northwest corner. The tough went on toward Eighth avenue. A minute later a hatless youth of seventeen came running up to the policeman. As he ran he kept calling out, "Stop him, stop him," pointing to the tough. "He

The officer turned around slowly and looked after the tough. He was near Eighth avenue by that time.

"Well. I couldn't eatch him now anyhow," he said coolly, and then he proceeded to moralize. "It serves you right," he said. "I woke you up on the curb over an hour ago and told you togo home. You'd oughter did it."

The hatless youth explained that he had gone home and sat down on the steep of his own house, because it was teo hot to go in and go to bed. He fell into a dese, from which he was awakened by the thief tugging at his watch chain. Before ho was wide awake the third toke the chain and made off with his watch. The boy looked ruefully after the tough, and then turned on his heel, remarking. "I suppose I'd better go back and get my hat, if that isn't gone already, too."

The policeman resumed his confab with his friends.

THE TROLLEY CAUSES PRICTION. Brooklyn Railrond Men Overworked and on the Brink of a Strike. Since the trolley lines have come into almost general use in Brooklyn there has been more or less friction between the employees of the various lines and the companies. The dissatisfaction on the part of the City Railroad Company's men has been particularly marked, and just now there are loud threats of a possible strike. The last tie-up on the city road occurred in April, 1881, and resulted in a victory for the men, the company having since recognized them as District Assembly No. 75 of the Knights of Labor, and having renewed its contract with them from year to year. There has been with them from year to year. There has been an iron-clad rule that the men on this road are not to work more than ten hours within the regular twelve working hours of the day. Thus they get two hours for rest and their meals. Since the bustle and excitement attending the introduction of the trolley law occurred, the men allege that this rule have been violated and that they have been deprived of extra pay due them. Committees from separate lines have called on President Lewis from time to time and the troubles were straightened out.

time to time and the troubles were straightened out.

The motormen and conductors on the Greene and Gates avenue troiley line, which was opened last week, are now in a state of revolt. They compose Local Assembly No. 2.878. K. of L. which is a branch of District Assembly No. 75. The men on this line allege that they have been overworked, not having time even to swallow their dimens, and that many of them have not received extra pay, to which they were emitted. They held a secret and prolonged session in Stemmann's Hall in Palmetto street on Friday night, and hal almost reached the striking point, when their deliberations were interrusted by the receipt of a communication from Andrew D. Best, Master Workman of District Assembly 75. It notified the local Assembly that it must not interfere with the operation of the Greene and Gates avenue line, and that a failure to comply with the order would be "the signal for the suspension of the Assembly," After some breezy criticism of the Assembly, "After some breezy criticism of the Master Workman's action the local Assembly, appointed a committee to wait upon President Lewis to-morrow and state their grievances and try and have them adjusted. The ship was the Grant, ex-Minister to Austria, and Elijah Halford, the Financial Secretary to the Behring Sea Commission, helped in the celebration. The day and night were cloudless, and after the toasting and singing and dancing fireworks were shot off from the promenade deck. Two days later the English passengers had their innings celebrating the marriage of the Duke of York and the Princess May. The band played "God Save the Queen," alias "America," and Britons and Yankees declared with post-prandial fervor that Uncle Sam was a joly good fellow, by Jove, and the Queen was another. Sea Commission, helped in the celebration

Among the New York's passengers were Mrs. F. D. Millet, wife of the artist; Frederick de Belleville, and Fanny Rica. Col. Fred Grant said he might have retained his place as Minister to Austria if he had cared to do so. Editor G. W. Childs of the Philadelphia Ledger had persuaded the Democratic Administration to let Col. Grant hold over, but the Colonel, being a good Republican, decided that he would give up his job.

It is due entirely to weakened exhausted, and shattered nerves. No man or woman whose nervous system is in perfect condition ever endures a sleepless night. No person ever loses appetite or ambition whose nerves are puried. No new till perfect in ervous energy ever broke down.

What is the Bisterner Take care of the norves, and thus you will take care of yoursail and your life. You cannot do it it stainly thanking. You must do something more. You must have the nid of science and discovery not any presumed science of surposed discovery, but something real. If you se use that which is the best, the most perfect, mest complete, you will come to the discovery made by Prof. Phelps of Dart nouth College, known as Paine's celery compound. It is admitted by everybody whose opinions are entitled to consideration that this is the greatest and only discovery of the procent day for iseding the nerves, nourishing the brain, strengthening the muscles, and keeping the bealth, even in hot weather, in perfect condition.

Mr. John blakely, the well-known tobacco and clear deale, whose place is directly opposite the Post Office, was formerly a lost Office employed. In speaking upon the micest above nontioned be was enthusiastic. Mr. Blakely's system became so exhausted by overwork and application to bullness that he was afflicted with insomnia. "I am happy to say, however, he exclaimed, that from the use of Paine's celery compound I am now able to sleep comfortably all night, and I owe my increased health and has pinces to its use if has also been of great benefit to the various members of my family."

Any man or woman who is sleepless or restless can avoid such a condition, with all the bad consequences it brings, by care and following the suggestions above given.—Adr.

Dora Stephan, the missing 10-year-old daughter of William Stephan of 384 Marcy avenue, Williamsburgh, was found vesterday street station in a house in Ciymer street, near Wythe avenue. She accused Walter Francis, her sweetheart, who lives at 202 West Seventeenth street, this city, of having induced her to leave her home on Wednesday night. She said that after leaving her house Francis took her to a hotel in Fast New York. He promised her to a hotel in Fast New York. He promised to marry her the next day. Yesterday he told her to go to the Clymer street house and wait there until the afternoon, when he would return with a ring, and they would be married. Francis, however, did not come.

The girl was arraigned in the Lee Avenue Police Court and committed to the custody of the Society for the Preventiqu of Cruelty to Children, while a warrant against Francis for abduction was issued. Francis had given the girl to understand that a fortune of $80,000 had been left him by an aunt who had died in England.

Michael Piscar's Hard Fate,

In the early part of this year Michael Fiscar arrived in this city from Hungary and took a room in the lodging house kept by Abraham Hirschson in Hester street. One night in the latter part of March some one entered Piscar's room and robbed him of 100 gulden, all the money he possessed. Piscar held his landnoney he possessed. Fiscar field his land-lord responsible for the loss, and in a wrangle that followed the Hungarian struck filrach-sen on the nose, causing it to bleed. The next day the landlord had his lodger arrested, and Piscar was taken to Easex Market Police-Court, where Judge Taintor held him for trial. He was taken to the Tombs, where he had been ever since. A reporter saw him in his cell yesterday. Between his sobs he said bitteriy:

cell yesterday. Between his subs he can bitterly:

"I don't know what I've done to deserve such punishment." he said. "Everyloody in the prison sympathizes with me, and is working for my release, but I guess it's no use. A kind-hearted old gentleman who took an interest in me went to the District Attorney and inquired why I was detained. They looked for the papers in my case, but couldn't find them."

Charles Boehmer of 347 East Seventy-fourth street was caught on Friday night chasing & erowd of children, among whom were a number of little girls.
